Marion Plant Fights the "Tokyo Kid"

DEMANDS WAR BOARD CHANGE

Truman Committee Issues Report Criticizing Production Board.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, June 18— A demand for changes in men and methods of the war production board came today from Chairman Truman (D-Mo) of the special Senate committee investigating national defense as he issued a report criticizing what the committee termed "damaging delay" in the conversion of major civilian industries to war purposes.

"The WPB has not fully measured up to this responsibility," Truman said in a statement.

He went on to say that "fulfillment of this responsibility will require a change in both the organization and personnel of some branches and divisions of the WPB."

The 32-page printed report upheld part of the charges made against WPB by Robert P. Guthrie, who resigned March 14 from the WPB executive staff with a protest that some dollar-a-year men had impeded the war production program because of private interests.

Recommends Checks

Recommending additional restrictions upon big business executives now serving in the war production effort, the Senate committee said it believed that "the Guthrie case points to the conclusion that certain dollar-a-year men within the bureau of industry branches (of WPB) are unable to divorce themselves from their subconscious gravitation to their own industries."

Senators said these conclusions were based upon both public and closed hearings into charges made by Guthrie and others. Included were details and critical surveys of various industries.

The senate conclusions differed widely from an earlier report by a

ARTHUR PRYOR DIES

By The Associated Press

WEST LONG BEACH, N. J June 18 — Arthur Pryor, 71, noted bandmaster and composer to whose martial tunes millions of Americans marched, died today in his home here.

Committee Awaits Arrival of U. S. Agent June 28.

A record of all complaints on rents in Marion is being kept in anticipation of the coming of a federal rent administrator after June 28, Mayor Russell C. Snare said yesterday.

No meetings of the local fair rent committee are scheduled prior to June 28, last day of the 60-day deadline given the city to stabilize rents as of March 1, 1942.

Since the committee is without legal power to act in cases involving exhorbitant or unfair rents, there would be little gained by calling a session, the mayor said. However, all complaints of both landlords and tenants are being filed.

The mayor said there was little doubt that a federal administrator would be named to function in Marion after June 28, since Marion has been declared a defense rental area.

No official word has been received as to naming an administrator, but under regulations which Price Administrator Leon Henderson made effective in Marion "if, at the end of 60 days Mr. Henderson finds that his recommendations for the area have not been met, he can step in at any time and regulate rentals."

In reply to a question involving a Marion family whose rent on April 1 was raised from $25 to $50 a month, the mayor said,

"If I were a renter in that situation I would continue to pay $25. March 1 has been set as the stabilizing date and to pay a higher rent after that date makes the renter as guilty of violating the fair rent regulation as the landlord who raised the rent."

Defeat Conceded On Sales Tax Measure

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, June 18—A sales tax was conceded by its advocates today to have only an outside chance of approval as the house ways and means committee began putting the finishing touches on a tax bill which probably will produce about $6,650,000,000 in new revenue.

Hoping to end its work in a week, the committee still has to vote formally on a sales tax and two other subjects—a post-war credit for corporations which pay pay high excess profits taxes, and withholding of individual income taxes at the source.

CROWD SEES DRAFTEES OFF

Estimated 800 Assemble for Second Public "Send-Off" in Two Days.

The public send-off this morning at the bus terminal on North State street for a contingent of selectees from Marion county Draft Boards 2 and 3, the second group leaving Marion in two days, was witnessed by an estimated 800 persons.

The crowd, lining both sides of State street from Center street to the second alley, was made up of men, women and children. Included in the group was a large delegation from the North Main street school who had come to the terminal to say good-bye to their principal, Stuart C. Shipman of Girard avenue. Swelling the group of friends and relatives of those leaving were also a number of citizens who, although having no one in the selectee group, came to show the men that Marion was proud of them.

Band Plays

The Harding High school band, under the direction of Homer E. Huffman, instrumental music supervisor, marched from Central Junior High school to the bus terminal where they played a program of marches and patriotic songs including "America" and "God Bless America." Again, as yesterday, the "Star-Spangled Banner" was played as the men boarded the bus.

Preceding the band in their line of march were four American flags carried by James Saunders for the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Mrs. Saunders for the Veterans of Foreign Wars Auxiliary, Harvey Waxely for the Disabled American Veterans of the World War, and Larry Ralston, home on furlough from Drew field, Tampa, Fla., for the Marion Navy club, the Disabled American Veterans of the World War flag carried by Robert Campbell, the Veterans of Foreign Wars post colors by Lesley Farrell, the Veterans of Foreign Wars Auxiliary banner by Mrs. Margaret Foreman, president of the Auxiliary, and the Navy Union Jack by Henry Ulme, commandant of the Marion Navy club.

Presentations Made

As the men boarded the bus, Norval Foreman, commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars and a member of the American Legion, presented each one with a book entitled "Fall-in" with the following inscription on the inside cover, "Presented by Bird McGinnis Post 162 of the American Legion—with the best wishes for safety and success to the service man of today from the men and women of 1917-1918 with whom he is now a comrade." Also given each man by Major and Mrs. Joseph Heard of the Salvation Army was a Testament inscribed, "With best wishes from the Salvation Army."

Women of the Union station canteen then passed through the

REPORT SHOWS SPEED IN WORK AT WAR PLANT

Construction 2 Months Ahead of Similar Projects, Officer Reports.

Work on the Scioto Ordnance Plant here is two months ahead of similar projects started at the same time or earlier, Lt. Col. John P. Huling Jr., commanding officer, said today in a statement intended to clear up what apparently is a public misconception regarding the letting of subcontracts by the Hunkin-Conkey Construction Co., builders of the plant.

Col. Huling pointed out that the contract between the war department and the construction company provided for sub-contracting in cases where it was found the work could be expedited and done more cheaply by this method.

"The original contract, which is administered by Major Lockridge of the army engineers, is being adhered to in every respect," the colonel said. "It contemplated giving small contracts such parts of the work as possible.

"The situation is that whether or not a particular part of the plant is constructed by a subcontractor or by Hunkin and Conkey depends on who can do it at the lowest cost consistent with the necessary speed and efficiency.

Fine Progress Shown

"The Hunkin-Conkey company brought a fine organization to Marion and initiated the program in such a way that the project here is at least two months ahead of similar projects started at the same time or earlier.

"One job well done by the company has been the building of roads so that sub-contractors now can operate to good advantage. Bringing of a number of subcontractors will result in increased activity at the plant.

"It is true the Hunkin-Conkey company is laying off some men, but it would seem that these men will be needed in their trades by the sub-contractors.

"It is hoped that men attracted here by work on the plant will remain.

War Dept. Policy

"It has been the policy of the war department to make war plant work available to small contractors where possible. In the first wave of war plant construction in the summer of 1940 this was not possible to the extent it is now. Since then plans and the business of administering plant construction have been better organized to distribute the work to more firms.

"The area engineer, the contractors, and Holabird and Root, the architectural firm, and the office of the commanding officer have worked together on the project in the closest harmony. As commanding officer I would like to say that the ordnance department is very much pleased with the progress shown.

"I consider every nail driven and every yard of concrete poured a definite step toward winning the war of production.

"I know of no more favorable location than Marion for a war plant. The public acceptance has been fine as has been the attitude of labor and management."

Col. Huling also announced that part of the force of the construction company has moved to offices at the site of the plant. The offices at the corner of North Main and George streets, however, have not been entirely vacated. Plans for moving other office forces connected with the plant still are indefinite.

15 Tons of Scrap Rubber Gathered in County Drive

Campaign Officials Hear Reports at Meeting: Boy Scouts Plan To Help in Collection.

Marion county reports have contributed [illegible] pounds of rubber since Monday when a two-week nationwide drive for scrap rubber started, according to reports received at a meeting of campaign officials last night in the Chamber of Commerce offices on North State street.

Officials of the drive, including George Abel, Marion county chairman of the Ohio Salvage committee and H. A. Krigbaum and J. P. Sharkey, Marion county co-chairmen of the Petroleum War Council, predicted the drive would gain momentum within the next few days.

Scouts To Aid

Basis for the committee's statement was the joint announcement of Fred P. Strother, Harding area Boy Scout executive, and Mr. Krigbaum that Marion Boy Scouts would start a house to house canvass of rubber. The scouts will ring every door bell in the city to make "this drive a success," Mr. Strother told the committee last night.

Loy D. Rhoads, who is scoutmaster of Troop 1 sponsored by the Flax lodge, has been appointed chairman of the Boy Scout participation in the drive, Mr. Strother announced today. Mr. Rhoads will meet with all Marion scouts Saturday at 1 p. m. on the front steps of Central Junior High school. On Saturday scouts will canvass the east and west streets in Marion. All homeowners who report old rubber on hand will be asked to keep the rubber for the scouts. Names and addresses of persons cooperating with the scouts efforts will be recorded. Early next week scouts will return in trucks to gather the scrap rubber.

Mr. Strother said that scout troops in Waldo, Morral and La Rue would also cooperate in the drive. In addition local scouts will canvas Caledonia if possible, he added.

To Benefit USO

Entire proceeds of the scout project will be donated to the United Service Organization. Proceeds from rubber placed in the general bin erected by the Marion County Salvage committee in the city parking lot at Prospect and Church streets will also be turned over to the U. S. O.

Participation in the rubber drive will mark the fourth such campaign the scouts have conducted. Last summer the scouts conducted two scrap aluminum drives when a shortage resulted which threatened to slow up national defense preparations. For the last several months scouting groups throughout the Harding area have been engaged in a scrap paper drive.

By collecting waste paper, scouts rendered two services—supplying the nation with a much-

BUS FOR WAR PLANT SERVICE IS DELAYED

Not Expected To Arrive for Week or 10 Days.

Failure of a Wooster bus body factory to make delivery on a machine for the Marion Rapid Transit Co. today will delay inauguration of bus service from Marion to the site of the Scioto Ordnance Plant at least a week or 10 days, Ray Maag, head of the bus company, said today.

Mr. Maag announced earlier in the week that service would be started next Monday if the new bus came in today. He went to Wooster last night and learned that the machine would not be completed for nearly a week. The bus is being rebuilt from an automobile haul-away trailer. After inspecting the bus Mr. Maag said it would serve its purpose here very well.

Should the bus be delivered by the latter part of next week service will be started the following Monday from the courthouse to the plant site. Fares will be 10 cents each way. There will be no transfers to the city lines.

With the bus coming from Wooster the transportation company will use a Chicago World's fair bus already here.

HEARING DATE SET ON CLUBS

State Board To Determine Whether 2 Marion Licenses Should Be Revoked.

Hearing to determine whether the liquor permits of the Mayfair night club on South Main street and of Mrs. Bertha Brooks Yeager, doing business as the Royal cafe on North Main street, should be revoked for alleged violations of provisions of the state liquor code, has been set for next Tuesday at 9 a. m. in Columbus before the state board of liquor control.

Copies of notices of the hearing and a reply to a query as to permit qualifications were received yesterday by Police Chief William E. Marks.

Violation Charged

The violation alleged against the Mayfair, as stated in the notice "that meals are not served on your premises and that your permit premises has no facilities for the serving of food and meals." Against the Royal the alleged violation is "that your permit premises is not a restaurant or hotel as required by Section 6064-15 General Code, and that food and meals are not prepared and served on your premises."

The notices were signed by Jacob B. Taylor, director of the state department of liquor control.

The letter received by Chief Marks is from Thomas T. Craig of the permit division of the liquor control department and replies to a letter from the chief asking for an explanation of the issuing of liquor permits to both the Mayfair and Royal. The chief's letter was written following an investigation made by Acting City Solicitor R. M. Wilhelm at the request of city council. Result of the investigation brought a state liquor inspector to Marion last week to personally investigate the two clubs.

Text of Letter

Following is the main body of the letter from Mr. Craig.

"Answering your general questions regarding the qualifications for different permits, especially the prerequisite of food, may we point out that under the Liquor Control Act different types of permits entail different qualifications.

"As you realize after having read the statute governing the different licenses, the food qualifications are rather ambiguous. The holders of D-2 and or D-3 permits must qualify as bona fide GALION, June 18—Two hundred employes of the Central Ohio Steel Products Co. on South Market street are idle today as a result of Galion's first strike since the start of the war. The shutdown is the result of a dispute as the method of determining the collective bargaining agent at the plant.

ASSERT DRIVE CUTS THROUGH DEFENSE RING

German Leaders Also Declare British Libyan Army Split Into Two Parts.

By The Associated Press

Grave new threats to the British armies in North Africa and the Russian defenders of Sevastopol were reported today as the German high command asserted that Nazi troops had driven into Sevastopol's outer defense ring and had split the British Libyan armies into two parts.

A bulletin from Adolf Hitler's field headquarters said the German siege armies storming Sevastopol, the last big Soviet stronghold in the Crimea, had captured Fort Gorky and driven within two miles of the harbor entrance.

The communique described Fort Gorky as "the most western and strongest bastion of the whole fortress."

Besides capturing Fort Gorky in the main fortifications north of the city, the axis assault forces also drove back stubborn Red army troops on the southern fortifications, the Hitler command said.

Denied by Russians

The Nazi claim of having knifed into Sevastopol's ring of fortifications was unconfirmed elsewhere, the Russians declaring they had beaten off a series of savage new attacks.

In the Libyan desert struggle, British imperial headquarters acknowledged that British troops had withdrawn from two key defense points at Sidi Rezegh and El Adem.

The German high command said the British forces had been split into two parts.

A Nazi communique said strong German and Italian tank formations were pursuing the eastbound British column, which was described as "fleeing" toward Bardia, 15 miles from the Egyptian frontier.

Dispatches from Cairo said the British desert armies had apparently split into two forces, one falling back to fortified positions near the Egyptian border, the other remaining to defend Tobruk.

Last year, the British withstood eight months of violent siege at the Mediterranean coastal fortress until relieved by a new expeditionary force striking out of Egypt.

Tobruk Surrounded

The Reuters (British News Agency) correspondent at Cairo, headquarters of Gen. Sir Claude Auchinleck's imperial command, said Tobruk was "practically surrounded," with the costal road the only route left open to the east.

Despite Axis armored supremacy, the British declared they still maintained superiority in the air.

Apparent Strategy

The setback at two vital points on the half-moon front apparently meant that the British were now falling back on Tobruk's main defense works, where British Tommies, Australians, New Zealanders and Indian troops made history with their stand against axis siege armies last year.

Numerically outnumbered in tanks and other armored equipment after 24 days of fierce desert fighting, the British evidently elected to retire behind Tobruk's perimeter of solid fortifications.

An Italian communique said Axis armored columns had captured strong British positions in the El Adem sector and were mopping up British troops pocketed farther west in the vicinity of Ain El Gazala.

The Fascist command said Axis warplanes were blasting at British troops and lines of communications between El Adem and the Egyptian border, apparently seeking to prevent the arrival of reinforcements from the east or a retreat from the Tobruk area toward Egypt.

Russians Halt Assaults

In the Soviet campaign, Russia's armies beat off a series of furious new assaults on the bloody plains and heights around Sevastopol and shattered tank-led German infantry attacks on the Kharkov front amid indications that the Nazi war machine was losing some of its knockout punch.

The German military juggernaut that wiped out the great forts of Belgium, Holland and France with lightning speed in the summer of 1940 was reported making little headway in either of its latest Crimean and Ukraine offensives.

U. S. Planes on Job

Soviet front-line dispatches said hundreds of German dead and burned-out tanks littered the slopes before Sevastopol. Stockholm reports said United States-

Admiral Nimitz Discloses U. S. Air Power Exacted Heavy Losses in Pacific.

By The Associated Press

PEARL HARBOR, June 18—American air power exacted a stunning toll of 10 Japanese men and planes for every one lost by the United States in the Coral Sea and Midway Island battles and rapidly is being pulverized for even greater slaughter, blows.

Admiral Chester W. Nimitz made these cheering disclosures yesterday aboard a fighting ship in an address to his Pacific fleet.

He urged the heroic veterans of the two titanic sea-air fights "to hold the line until our reinforcements are ready to take over."

Acknowledging that losses to United States carrier air groups have been heavy since the war opened, due to initial Japanese air superiority, the commander-in-chief of the Pacific fleet strongly hinted that the picture was changing rapidly.

Whereas the personnel on aircraft carriers had to fight on with little rest or relief in the first stages of the war, Admiral Nimitz said "it will soon be possible to organize additional carrier groups and to rotate them."

"Although we feel keenly the loss of many fine officers and men, we take pride in knowing they gave their lives to turn back grave threats to our country," he declared.

"We can take satisfaction in the knowledge that in every meeting with the enemy since Dec. 7 his losses have greatly exceeded ours, and that in the Coral Sea and Midway actions his personnel losses were at least ten times greater than ours, and his plane losses in almost the same ratio.

Strength Increasing

"We are greatly increasing our battle strength. Our ships, planes and pilots are being added in constantly increasing numbers."

Admiral Nimitz praised the teamwork of the army, navy and marines in achieving the Midway victory, and announced medal awards to personnel of the aviation corps and the submarines.

But he pointed out that air power has played the leading role both in the Coral Sea and off Midway "and will continue to do so as the war progresses."

Admiral Nimitz read a message of congratulation from Secretary of Navy Knox.

The crushing defeat of a huge Japanese fleet off Midway thwarted capture of that island defending the approaches to Hawaii and constituted one phase of the masterful strategy of Admiral Nimitz in cutting the Japanese navy to pieces.

CHINESE EDUCATOR ON DELAWARE PROGRAM

Outlines Views on What Peace Terms Should Be.

Special to The Star

DELAWARE O., June 18—"There is no question of who will win the war in the Far East, it is only a question of time," Dr. Zing Yang Kuo, American-educated Chinese scientist and educator, told a large group of students and Delaware residents yesterday morning in Gray chapel on the Ohio Wesleyan university campus.

Dr. Kuo, formerly advisor to the Institute of Sino-American relations in Chunking, said the Allied nations will win, but that they must not accept an armistice until Japanese militarism is completely crushed. In outlining bases for a post-war settlement, Dr. Kuo said China is prepared to ask no indemnity or material recompense of Japan out that there must be no compromise in demilitarization. Self-government in Korea, the return of Manchuria to China and no more foreign concessions are other considerations which should be included in post-war settlements, he said.

A plant is nearing completion in Alaska to produce starch and glucose from about 20,000 tons of potatoes annually.

URGES CONTINUATION OF NAVAL BUILDING

Vinson Says Construction of Battleship Is Essential.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON June 18—Continuing construction of battleships was described by Chairman Vinson (D-Ga.) of the House naval committee today as "essential insurance" against a possibility that future carrier losses might "set sea warfare into an old fashioned slugging match."

He offered that observation in making it clear that the day of the big battleship was not done, despite the havoc wrought against them recently by torpedo planes and that the navy intended to continue work on battleship projects.

At the same time Vinson reiterated his contention that the aircraft carrier has become the backbone of the fleet as he urged before the rules committee seeking a go-ahead signal for an $8,553,000,000 fleet expansion measure which emphasizes floating aerial striking strength.

In a formal report, the House listed 1,008,245 tons of fighting ships built since 1934 now in service and 2,646,600 tons more under construction.

Passage of the expansion bill was urged to double the size of the fleet which had to that total 500,000 tons of aircraft carriers, 500,000 tons of light and heavy cruisers, and 900,000 tons of destroyers and destroyer escort vessels.

In addition, it would provide for 1,000 smaller craft to combat submarines. For the first time the committee offered a breakdown saying it would build 400 steel sub chasers, 200 wooden boats and 200 other patrol craft.

It informed Congress that the navy is fully alive to the value of not only sea power that carriers and the patrol bombers are playing in the present war, and said the navy planned to concentrate on immediate carrier construction.

STEUBENVILLE HAS BLACKOUT

First Ohio Industrial Area Experiment Is Considered Success.

By EDWIN B. GREENWALD
Associated Press Writer

STEUBENVILLE, O., June 18—Steubenville and [illegible] experiment [illegible] part in a [illegible]

[illegible] experiment [illegible] area, and many [illegible] that any [illegible] force living at home [illegible] would have seen it.

We soared over the region through it all in a civil air patrol plane, and the blackout was so total that you weren't sure whether you looked down upon a community of people or row of rural houses.

From 3,000 feet aloft there were visible, after a time, only three points of illumination: two big Bessemer furnace glowing at Mingo Junction two miles south, the lighted tower of Toronto five miles north and a steel plant in Weirton across the Ohio river.

Otherwise, it was utter darkness in Steubenville, Weirton, Follansbee and Wellsburg. Not a hint of light came from the busy Steubenville mills of the Weirton Steel and Wheeling Steel, nor from any across the broad Ohio in West Virginia save the one.

Active steel furnaces were shielded successfully but how this was accomplished was not disclosed.

The river itself, a source of some worry to defense officials faintly reflected a very pale moon. Except for this obscure gleam, the river was not a telltale landmark. The moon also picked up some faint outlines of homes but these the pilots said, would not have been noticed from bombing altitudes; and even at 3,000 feet you likely would not have identified them had you not known homes should be there.

Well Pleased

Col. Robert S. Harsch of the army's Fifth Corps area was well pleased.

"It was pretty close to 100 per cent," he said, "and I know the people of this area feel safer after this fine demonstration."

He estimated that 100,000 persons lived in the area affected. Of this, Jefferson county, Ohio, (Steubenville), and Brooke county West Virginia (Follansbee and Wellsburg) were ready for the blackout, but Weirton officials said they were not prepared because of late notification. Nevertheless, that city darkened quickly after the others blacked out.

The signal for dousing lights came at 9:58 o'clock just as planes bearing observers swept in; the all-clear followed at 10:23.

Trains were darkened as they went through the district, river boats pulled to shore, river lights and danger signals were turned low. For more than 15 minutes a row of billboards stood out like beacons in the northwest section of the city, but finally were blackened. The only incident reported was the smashing of a store sign in the downtown area after civilian defense police said they were unable to turn it off.

In the midst of the blackout, Gov. John W. Bricker asserted in a nationwide Mutual network broadcast that Steubenville and its people were to be commended for their endeavor.

Then speaking of Ohio's war effort, he said the state was second in the nation in the number of persons employed in war plants surpassed only by Pennsylvania.

He said that 112,000 additional workers had been hired since Jan. 1 and that new plants and those converted totalled 1,247.

China Won't Shrug Off

ALL THE news from China is bad. It is the dismal front of the United Nations. Paradoxically the Chinese armies that have been fighting the Japanese for five years never needed help so desperately as they did after they received some.

Lin Yutang, the Chinese philosopher, stated the case in a letter to the New York Times last Sunday. It was an antidote for smugness. "It is time that we export something more than words of praise and anti-Japanese propaganda to China," he wrote. "Wholly unintentional, and through neglect, China has been shamefully, disgracefully sold out by her allies. . . . It is imperative that America and England reassure China of their bending all-out efforts to defeat Japan, with no politicians' tricks of appeasing Japan and saving her for maintaining the politicians' theory of balance of power in the Far East after the war is over. . . . The Americans are desperately anxious to hear news of bombing Japan from Vladivostok. Here is China, ready to give bases and all cooperation for the Americans to have a chance to bomb Japanese troops right in China and right now. What is holding us from doing it?"

Certainly it is far from a comforting thought that China's ability to stave off defeat never was questioned so sharply as it is now, after gaining the United States and Great Britain as allies.

Whose Expectations Were They?

REPEATED assurances that United States manufacturers are exceeding expectations in war production are raising a question. Whose expectations were exceeded?

The evidence at hand is that the only persons surprised by the amount of stuff rolling off assembly lines and loading platforms are the theorists who have had the cat of governing officials for so many years.

The men who are doing the work aren't surprised. Quite the contrary, many of them are nursing headaches caused by realization that they could do a lot more if Washington knew more about their problems.

Evidently, revolutionary pinks and yearning reformers had done such a good job of smearing the American businessman that no one expected he was going to be able to redeem himself in a pinch. Theorists said he was deficient in social consciousness.

But now the doers are back in the saddle, and the talkers are bringing up the rear. The producers are getting attention and the parasites are getting the brush-off.

The people who never made anything in their lives but trouble have been invited to crawl back into the woodwork for the duration. The nation has no time to accommodate their peculiar whims for the duration.

It is busy winning the battle of production. Its more level-headed spokesmen are looking ahead to a conversion of war production to peace production when the war's over. The sterile political scheme of sharing the poverty has been made obsolete by the common sense plan of doing something about sharing the productivity. The sky is the limit on productivity—and only the non-producers whose bacon is being saved are surprised. Certainly war production exceeds their expectations. They were, for the most part, the same fellows who had so little faith in the resources of the United States that they wanted to tear it all down and build it back up according to a diagram in somebody's text book.

Confidence

WHAT seems to be a fresh surge of confidence started by the demonstration in the Pacific is being restrained by some of the experts. Americans, they warn, must get themselves braced for the impact of a lot more bad news. There will be momentous disappointments and reverses this summer. The Mediterranean area outlook is not bright. The situation in the Crimea is exceedingly unfavorable. The Asiatic prospect is bleak and gloomy. In fact, it wouldn't be putting it too strongly to say that, objectively, the United Nations are hanging on the ropes.

Nevertheless, they are confident. There is one element in their confidence that isn't easy to describe, but possibly has more to do with it than anything else. It is their own certainty that they have the winning idea. They can absorb reverses, as the British have absorbed them, because they have faith in the soundness of their own thinking. If their belief in a free world weren't superior to the Japanazi formula of a slave world, then the war wouldn't be worth fighting.

The aggressors have tackled, besides the military might of the United Nations, something else it can't lick—the credo of man's individual importance. To establish that fact, men have fought and died in countless revolutions. They have thought and worked and preached to establish something higher than a concept of despotism in human affairs. The totalitarians may be able to land on the Aleutians, capture Singapore, close the Mediterranean and wipe out Coventry, but they can't whip the shortcomings of their own thinking, which has nothing to offer to men who refuse to think as slaves.

News Behind the News

People of U. S. Do Some Thinking About Post-War World.

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, June 17—Judging from the views and comments of private citizens to me on occasions for prepared talks, certainly we are not agreed on how to maintain peace in the post-war world. But they are thinking and debating and from their thoughts and arguments, will come the right way.

There seem to be roughly three groups. Most earnest of these minorities, is the old League of Nations school of thought, which holds that Woodrow Wilson might have set this world straight with his idealism had not his league been corrupted by French and British politicians.

A second minority group, and a smaller one, is the old isolationist school, just as earnestly claiming that our concern for peace in the future should not be lifted beyond our shore line.

A third group, which seems to be in a majority, favors a new method, discarding both old theories as unsuccessful, and starting afresh now, on the basis of experience of the last 25 years, to plan realistically and intelligently for peace in a better way.

This group seems less interested than some of the administration spokesmen, like Vice President Wallace, in reforming the world socially. Apparently its primary inspiration is a thirst for international justice. Its primary purpose is domestic security founded on justice.

Few of the majority of my correspondents think British, French, Russian or any other statesmen are going to be much different after the war. They expect them to be looking out for their own interests as usual, but they also expect our statesmen to be looking out primarily for our interests.

Basic

Obviously no "plan" has yet caught their support. The one basic principle from which they are working is that this country shall not again be duped into disarmament.

One reader sent me a clipping from Claire Boothe Luce's analysis in Life magazine of the great career of General Stilwell, the American fighter appointed by China's Chiang Kai-shek to head his armies. Mrs. Luce was trying to find out why the general went to China after the first World war and interviewing him, she wrote:

"He said that when he returned home from France in 1919 he found 'a wave of pacifism was already in the making.' I went right into Chauncey Fenton's office, the head of the war personnel department in Washington, and I said 'Chauncey, from here out the army is in for a terrible drubbing at the hands of the sob sisters and starry-eyed idealists who think human beings ain't. I can't stay here and watch this country disarm and demobilize to the point of disaster. It'll just make me boiling mad and I'll do or say something that will get me into trouble. So please give me a job that will remove me as far from this painful scene as possible'."

He went to China.

The general must have been madder yet in Burma where the fruits of this lack of American vigilance utterly prevented him from getting the planes and tanks in time to stop the vicious war march of slaughter, rape and brutality.

Treaties

This time this nation clearly is not going to dispense with the service of its heroic fighters who are now winning this war and depend for protection upon expensively purchased treaties which have never done the job before.

This is the direction, at least, which Mr. Roosevelt and Britain have taken in their Russian agreement. There are some who say the agreement may be a preliminary to selling the New Deal around the world at the price of canceling Allied obligations to us for war materials, but that suspicion has no strong evidence yet to back it.

The primary point of the British treaty with Russia is that the victors are going to stay in arms until they have positive security. So far as treaties go, it looks like this one ought to be kept.

If followed realistically, and if no effort is made by propaganda after the war to stampede our people into delivering their shirts as well as their lives into the hands of any power which has interests superior to our own national interests, the long armistice will carry real security a long time into the future.

It may even mean "peace in our time." (Chamberlain's unwittingly ironic words as he waved the paper agreement signed at Munich before his people in England—a treaty in which even his faith was shortlived).

Other things which the majority of my readers seem anxious to insist upon are:

Free access to raw materials of the world (no more Dutch-British rubber combines for instance); freer world trade (extension of Hull's plan); a permanent anti-aggression policy both for this government and everyone (let no ambition for empire spring up either in our country or any other place, and enforce this policy with a superior army, navy and air force, here or any place else on earth).

Keep your own peace with eternal vigilance and the strongest right arm in the world. Insist on fairness and justice in international affairs with real authority and not with meek, disarmed pacifism. Support democracy and your Christian principles in world affairs by powerful Democratic and Christian example, and not by conquests or ambition for empire.

Then, after the world has come to appreciate fully the intelligence of our peaceful ways and inclinations, when it shares our native idealism, in 20 years, 50 years or 100—and shows it conclusively—the time will have arrived when we may safely lay down our arms and trust in treaties.

So say a majority of my readers to me.

Huey's Boy On the Way

Politics in His Blood—but War Comes First.

By JO THOMPSON
Wide World Features

BATON ROUGE, La.—Now that Russell Long, oldest son of the late Senator Huey P. Long, Louisiana's slain political dictator, has donned cap and gown and received his law diploma from Louisiana State university, he looks forward "to enter state politics—naturally."

"But first of all," says Russell, a dead ringer for his father, "I'm going to join either the army or the navy and after the war is over I plan to practice law here at the state capital for a while.

"I think people want their public office holders to prove they can make a living and become financially independent, after that of course I'll enter politics—it's in my blood," he said with a grin.

The 23-year-old youth doesn't believe in entering politics too young. "So many spring chickens are nipped in the bud."

He resembles to his father in stature — the curly shock of brown hair, square jaw and mannerisms of speech, that typified the late senator, whose political machine ruled the state until five years after the self-styled "Kingfish" was shot and killed in 1935 in the Louisiana statehouse.

"A lot of our Louisiana politicians just dabble in politics as a sideline," says Russell, "but when I get into the game I'm going to make a career of it."

In his pre-law school years at L.S.U., Russell and his sister, Rose, now Mrs. Osmyn M. Fiedland, were leaders in campus politics—Russell serving as president of the student body and his sister as co-ed vice-president.

RUSSELL LONG

Their campus political rallies smacked of the rough and tumble demagogue Huey used to lead. Students were lured to the meetings by name bands and drawings of $5 entrance prizes every fifteen minutes, and platforms, later carried out, were to reduce student laundry rates and improve bus service to and from the campus.

Opponents of his famous father are now in control of the Louisiana government but followers and leaders of the "Long machine" now are banding together again and promise a strong bid for a return to power in the 1944 gubernatorial election. By that time perhaps Russell may be ready to make his first political splash.

ANOTHER FRONT THAT FRIGHTENS HITLER

Today and Tomorrow

Winning of War and Winning of Peace Must Go Hand in Hand.

By WALTER LIPPMANN

A SHORT item of news received here on Wednesday illustrates a very large principle: that winning the war and winning the peace are not two separate and distinct operations but rather like using both our legs when we go marching. We might get to our goal, which is victory, by hopping along on one leg, and then conceivably we might get back home, which is peace, by hopping on the other. But it would take longer and it would be much more painful and exhausting.

The news item is from London reporting that after an address by the prime minister, General Sikorski, "the Polish National Council passed a resolution giving sincere approval to the Anglo-Soviet treaty." The Poles have an enormous interest at stake: their hope of liberation depends upon a victory of Russian, British, and American arms, and therefore upon the efficiency of the military alliance; their future as an independent state depends upon good relations with their nearest neighbor, Soviet Russia.

To have reached agreements which the Poles can now underwrite shows how practical measures for a good peace can strengthen the military alliance.

For if Moscow, London and Washington had not risen to the enlightened and long view, the Poles might have swallowed the bitter pill and remained silent. But their silence would have been ominous: it would have taken the heart out of the Poles who fight so gallantly at home and abroad, the other occupied peoples would have been profoundly discouraged. Thus the Russians and the British, and we too, would have lost the confidence of our hidden allies who now, behind the German lines, are preparing for the day when they will rise up to help us.

Bolsters Confidence

The liberal policy is, therefore, a great military asset because of its effect on the confidence of the small nations in Europe and elsewhere, and no less because it promotes trust among the great powers. Yet it is necessary for us to understand that the liberal policy becomes a feasible policy only when it was clear that the United States is preparing to act strongly and constructively in the post-war period. If we had not been able to say, as we did in Mr. Sumner Welles's Memorial day speech, that we would help to police the armistice, we would have been in no position to express any opinions about what Russia ought to do to make her western borders strategically secure. If we had not made commitments for the armistice period, we should not have had this liberal agreement, and we might well have had to fight a larger and harder war to get to any kind of armistice.

By combining armaments and diplomacy, by weaving together the conduct of the war and the preparation of the peace, we are marching on our two legs to our goal.

With this in mind we can see more clearly the very large practical importance of the President's fifth report to congress on lend-lease. Here is more than a record of our exports of military goods and services, and more than the story of how, since we entered the war, lend-lease has become the machinery for pooling the resources of the grand alliance. This fifth report looks forward to the armistice period, and makes important commitments which affect both the practical conduct of the war now and the world after the war. They are commitments of the United States government, officially laid before Congress, and if they are assented to now, they are morally binding and cannot be torn up later.

They will be assented to, and indeed warmly approved, because the commitments are the sheerest common sense and immensely and clearly beneficial.

Dollar Sign Out

The first of the commitments is that we shall not regard our munitions exports to the United Nations, and their reciprocal services to us, as a financial account to be settled some day in money and goods. We have adopted the principle that when a nation has given all it can give to fighting our enemies, it has given all that we can ever ask of it. Thus once and for all time we are discarding the idea, a horrible and embarrassing idea even to contemplate, that a financial accounting could ever be discussed in which the blood and agony of the Chinese, the Russians, the British, the Poles and the Czechs and the Norwegians and the Dutch, was weighed in some kind of balance with that of our men on Bataan and at Corregidor, in the Java Sea and in the Coral Sea, at Midway and the Aleutians and in the Mediterranean.

There is no way in which the United Nations can assess the debt which each owes to the other. How can any price be placed upon what peoples have given when they have given everything? What debt collector will ever dare to stand up and tell us the financial value of the battle of Britain, or of the defense of Moscow, or of Malta, or of the Czechs who perished at Lidice? There will be no such monstrous reckoning as that.

The second commitment is that when the armistice comes, we shall use the machinery which is developed out of lend-lease to provide relief for the stricken peoples, and the means of rehabilitation, and of the revival of civilian production and trade "solidly founded on stable exchange relationships and the liberal principles of commerce."

For only by pledging our resources to relief and reconstruction can we make clear to all, including the enemy peoples we mean to vanquish, that there is a light at the end of the long tunnel. Only by making it certain that they can repair the havoc of war, will we be able to bring about the demobilization of the great armies and the reconversion of industry. Only by doing this successfully can we hope to use the power of government to plan and direct, to regulate and control, but not to supplant, private and corporate enterprise. Only by insuring the survival of enlightened enterprise, can we hope to live again in a world which is productive and free.

Fighting Irish

Joseph Ignatius Constantine C[illegible] Wrote Famous Tribute to the Kellys, Burkes, O'Hares.

By DAMON RUNYON

"THE Fighting Race" is the correct title of verse about Kelly and Burke and that I requested of my readers not long. Judging from the response it must have the favorite poem of another generation. I received upward of a thousand copies to

Some of them are newspaper clippings lowed by age and torn from scrapbooks. C are typed or written by hand, many memory according to the contributors, accuracy indicates the strong impression Fighting Race" made on their minds long It is not easy to remember a poem almost for word after a lapse of many years.

"The Fighting Race" was inspired by sinking of the battleship Maine in Havana h and the names on the casualty list. The of the ringing verse has flamed anew as the same names leap out of the headlines I will reprint the poem in my column so in spite of its length and the fact that been published elsewhere lately. It is the beautiful tribute extant to the Kelly Burkes and Sheas and the O'Hares and nells and all of the other members of fighting race" of these times.

MEANTIME, I will tell you something author, Joseph Ignatius Constantine C who was a New York newspaperman wrote his great poem. Irvin S. Cobb and H. Lake, both now living, are among the toilers of Park Row who remember De Casseres, a poet in his own right and a famous columnist, surely must recall too. Cobb once recited the poem at a dinner, with great effect.

Stuart Lake says he was on James G Bennett's Herald and knew "Jic" pretty around 1910, until just before the first war. He says one of his choicest recollections is of Clarke's rendition of his own poem, t ly at Lipton's once celebrated haunt for Park Row lads. He remembers hearing it at Perry's in the World building when Green and Frank Ward O'Malley, great porters of their era, were also present.

Lake says Don Marquis was the one could always get "Jic" started reciting and Paul Thompson and Ben De Casseres among his favorite editors. You know Dublin university manner of handling English language—the mellowest, lo thing of which a human is capable. N ever heard poetry in more beautiful fa comments Lake of Clarke's recital.

CLARKE was born in Kingstown, near lin, July 31, 1846, and died Feb. 27 at his home on West 95th after a brief at the age of 79. He came to this country he was 22, worked on the Irish Republic a then joined the staff of the Herald, he remained 13 years. He was accour splendid all-around newspaperman.

He became managing editor of the M Journal in 1883 and in 1898 was made of the Criterion, a theatrical publication ing this time he wrote numerous pla cluding starring vehicles for Julia Marlo Grace George. He published several boo poems but "The Fighting Race" gave h greatest fame. He wrote it in a hurry. Bu by inspiration.

In 1905 he attended a dinner of the ly Sons of St. Patrick to recite a poem own entitled "The Rough Rider." Pr Theodore Roosevelt, who was present, re him to recite "The Fighting Race," whic attracted wide attention to the verse. went back to the Herald as Sunday edit in 1906 the Standard Oil Co. decided it a little kind publicity and hired him at a said to have been $20,000 a year.

He retired in 1913. He rests in Wo cemetery, New York.

REPORT ON DRIVE IN WYANDOT COUNTY

Expect Collections To Exceed Total Estimates.

Special to The Star

UPPER SANDUSKY, June 18—Rubber scrap collection in Upper Sandusky appears likely to exceed the earlier estimates of 30,000 pounds as the drive today nears the close of its first week and the half way mark in the campaign.

Stacks of varying size and content are growing on service station drives as their owners and operators enter whole-heartedly into the collection in the hope of modifying the drastic rationing of gasoline expected if the drive does not produce a substantial stock.

Karl Trautman of the Lite-Star Oil Product Co., has been named chairman of the Wyandot county petroleum industry committee in charge of the program here.

The wide variety of articles turned in is a cause of constant wonder and anticipation to station men, who say many of their customers just toss in a contribution of the scarce material and don't wait for the penny-a-pound payoff.

Others who do accept payment are buying defense stamps with the proceeds.

Marysville Man Goes to New Company Post

MARYSVILLE, June 18—Warren Bullock, assistant superintendent of the Nestles Milk Products, Inc., plant here has been transferred and will leave July 1 to assume duties as assistant superintendent of the Sunbury plant owned by the same company. He will be succeeded here by H. D. Nels from the company's Ubly, Mich. plant.

FUNDS DISTRIBUTED

MT. GILEAD, June 18—Morrow county and villages and township of the county received the final distribution of 1940 auto license tax funds from the state auditor this week. The county received $1,810 and the 16 townships share equally in a $700 fund. Mt. Gilead received $72, Cardington $88, Edison $47, Sparta $30, Chesterville $12, and Marengo $11.

KISS FOR SOLON

In Washington to promote the use of cotton, Camille Anderson, selected 1942 "Maid of Cotton," has a kiss for Senator Ellison D. "Cotton Ed" Smith of South Carolina. Miss Anderson's home is in Memphis Tenn.

MOOSE OFFICIAL VISITS MARION LODGE MEETING

J. J. Stoehr, Regional Director Speaks to 200.

J. Jack Stoehr, regional director of the Loyal Order of Moose for Ohio, West Virginia and Pennsylvania, addressed approximately two hundred members of Marion Lodge No. 889 last night.

In speaking of what the Moose is doing for the country today he stated that $200,000 worth of defense bonds had been purchased by the national organization and more than $5,000,000 had been invested by individual lodges.

Announcement was made of initiation scheduled for Sunday, June 28. Deputy Probate Judge Ellis Rippner of Cleveland will be guest speaker and the Marion degree staff will be in charge of ritualistic work.

In the contest for new members, of which 200 is the goal, James Irey is leading with E. E. Dwire and O. B. Manbeck in second and third places.

Richard Jerew, 12, Individual Star of Lion's Bait Casting Tourney

Twelve-year old Richard Jerew, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Jerew of 322 Latourette street, was the individual star of Wednesday's third annual Lions club bait casting tournament at McKinley park lake.

Young Jerew captured first place in the junior division bait casting for accuracy event with a score of 91 out of a possible 100. His mark equalled the previous all-tourney mark. In compiling the remarkable score, Richard made five bulls-eyes and had an average miss of less than one foot.

Louis Nicodemus, 16, of 274 Hane avenue, winner of the junior division bait casting for distance event with a record cast of 150 feet, tied young Jerew in the regular accuracy tournament with an 84 out of a possible 100. However, Jerew's five bulls-eyes and final mark of 91 far surpassed Nicodemus' best efforts in the playoff. Nicodemus scored 78 points in the playoff.

Breaks Old Record

Nicodemus' 150 foot cast in the junior division bait casting for distance tourney broke the old pool record of 142 feet held by Ray Richmond. John Rayner, 16, of 322 Latourette street finished second to Nicodemus in the bait casting for distance event.

Because only a few entries were received for the junior division fly casting events, the sponsors cancelled these events and permitted any junior entrants to participate in the senior contests.

Lloyd Ledley of Orchard street rolled up a score of 90 in the senior division bait casting for accuracy event. W. R. Jerew of 322 Latourette street, father of the tourney's young star, finished second with 86.

Emery Kline of 508 East Farming street won the senior division bait casting for distance event with a cast of 137 feet in a playoff. He tied with H. W. Street in the regular tourney, but won the event when Street's first playoff cast back lashed.

R. Bond won the fly casting for distance event with a cast of 85 feet. Louis Nicodemus was second with a cast of 35 feet.

Wins Accuracy Event

In the fly casting for accuracy event, R. Bond placed first with 76 and Louis Nicodemus was second with 10.

In a women's bait casting for accuracy event, Jean Barheider won with a score of 76.

A total of 23 participated in the tournament, Co-Chairman Bob Cunningham and Ray Balderson reported today. More than 500 persons were on hand to witness the contests.

Winners were awarded prizes following the contests last night. Prizes were donated by Marion merchants.

A total of 24 participated in the tournament, Co-Chairmen Bob Cunningham and Ray Balderson said today.

Judges for the contests were John Gillis, Ray Balderson and John Gage. Cecil Gabler directed the tourney and Bob Cunningham was official scorer.

The club will offer a trophy to the fisherman catching the largest black bass in Marion county waters before Oct. 1. Persons catching record bass should register their catches at the Turner Hardware store on East Center street, Mr. Cunningham said today.

Marion Air Raid Chief Attends State School

Earl Ruhlman, Marion's chief air raid warden, went to Columbus yesterday to attend a school for instructors at Ohio State university sponsored by the Ohio American Legion and the Ohio state council of defense.

A Columbus paper this morning carried a three-column picture of Mr. Ruhlman demonstrating how to put out a magnesium bomb.

Incendiary bombs whose fierce flames seared through thick metal in a matter of seconds and showered white hot sparks for 50 feet lit up a field in last night's demonstration in combating wartime fire hazards.

About 150 men are attending the five-day school.

Frank Kette, air raid chief when the civilian defense program was set up and put into motion, resigned the post several weeks ago because he was going into a shop and felt he did not have the time the assignment requires, he said today. He now is assistant chief air raid warden.

THREE WOMEN GET HARDIN CO. TERMS

Appear in Court After Altercation at McGuffey.

Special to The Star

KENTON, O., June 18—Three young women who came to McGuffey two months ago from Prestonburg, Ky., today faced the prospect of staying in Hardin county jail most of the rest of this year.

Yesterday they were fined $100 and costs and sentenced to 30 days each by Mayor William Paugh of McGuffey, on charges of being drunk and disorderly. A short time later, Justice of Peace Lyman Clark conducted a hearing of charges that they assaulted Mrs. Rolie Patrick of Alger and two of the three were fined an additional $100 and sentenced to 30 days more in county jail. The third, Juanita Fitzpatrick Stanley, 20, pleaded innocent and was held under $500 bond for a hearing later this week.

Those who were fined on both charges were Ruth Bayes Calhoun, 21, and Mary Lou Fitzpatrick, 18.

Rolie Patrick, 23, Alger, husband of the injured woman, allegedly held his wife while the other three women struck her and pulled her hair. He was fined $50 and costs on a disorderly conduct charge and later was fined $50 and costs, and sentenced to 30 days in jail for non-support of his wife and two children. The offenses occurred in McGuffey Tuesday.

UNFAIR TO LOVE

CHAPTER THIRTY-TWO

Another Picket

"HE did a boy-scout good deed!" said Uncle Frank, appearing in the doorway "My car got out of order just when I needed it most, and he came forward with his—like a thoroughbred."

"You mean me—" Kathleen stopped, completely confused

"Ducky," said Uncle Frank, "meet your aunt!" He came out, stood with his arm around Ruby "Pretty sudden, I know—but we had to get married in between performances"

Kathleen found her voice at last And when she spoke it was hard for her to keep the singing in her heart from breaking forth into sound

"Oh!" she said, laughing "I'm delighted.' She kissed Ruby, and she hugged her uncle. "Only I—I thought it was Joe you'd married. So did Fred DeMille He saw you and Joe getting into Joe's car early this morning, and so—'

'Me marry a mere kid!" exclaimed Ruby "The idea!"

"Where is Joe now?" Kathleen asked.

"He's working at the office, I think," Uncle Frank replied "He said he had a lot of work to catch up."

Kathleen smiled. "Excuse me, you two newlyweds, while I go see to the meal!" In the doorway, she paused for a second. "Do you really feel marriage is—is—more important than a career, Ruby?"

"I certainly do," said Ruby She reached up and patted Uncle Frank's cheek. "We're going to be terribly happy, I know—Frank and I."

"You bet we are," agreed Uncle Frank. "And Ruby's going to work with Joe on his play Maybe when they try it out next summer, you can have a part in it."

"Thanks," said Kathleen, but without enthusiasm.

She went into the dining room She got out her best tablecloth, the fine old Vaughan silver, and the sterling silver candlesticks that had belonged to her great-grandmother. She arranged the table so that it would have made a splendid illustration for a good housekeeping magazine. And Lizzie was just as successful with the food that she served.

"Why didn't you elope in Ruby's car?" Kathleen asked suddenly.

"Good lord, Ducky," said Uncle Frank, "I'd feel like a fool eloping in a car belonging to the girl I was marrying'"

"He said," smiled Ruby, "that it would be too much like a kidnapping."

"I see," said Kathleen, remembering what she had said to Fred that morning. "Anyway, it was nice to have Joe along for one of the witnesses. I'm sorry I overslept."

Then Ruby and Uncle Frank were hurrying off to the barn theater and Kathleen was alone. She sat there upon the porch, watching the fireflies, and listening to the summer insects. And still no telephone call from Joe.

Stubborn, unforgiving! Eight o'clock came and went. Nine o'clock. Kathleen could stand the waiting no longer. She leaped to her feet, her eyes shining She had an idea—a wonderful idea She ran into the house, and up to her room. There she shut herself in, careful to lock the door so that Lizzie couldn't come barging in unannounced.

It was a little after ten o'clock when she came out again, and it was half an hour later than that when Joe Neely went to the window of the Linville Gazette office to look out, and saw her. He stared, unbelieving, for Kathleen was marching up and down in front of the building and she carried a placard which bore the words "Joe Neely is Unfair to Love"

When he had recovered his faculties so that he could speak, he leaned out of the window and called "Kathleen, darling I'll be right down!"

He slammed shut the window, and went racing down the stairs. A moment later the placard Kathleen had been carrying lay in the gutter, and Kathleen herself nestled in Joe's arm.

"You precious little idiot," he whispered, "where on earth did you get that sail!" in the?"

"I made it," said Kathleen "I made it all for you, my precious idiot. And if you don't tell me you love me, I'll picket you until—until the cows come home!"

"I love you," said Joe

"Darling!" said Kathleen. "Now I'm going to put Mary and Martha back in my old barn, just the minute those actors get out!"

two days with no agreement reached as yet. The company spokesman has no comment to make other than the fact that the plant was closed down.

The chairman of the negotiating committee, Hal Cross, said that the committee met two weeks ago with G. L. Steifel, president of the concern, Norman J. Schlacker, superintendent, and Attorney Carl H. Heckel of Mansfield at which time discussion came up as to whether a national labor relations board election should be held or a labor board conciliator is called in to count paid-up union memberships against the payroll as a means of deciding whether the I. A. M. held a majority at the plant.

Mr. Steifel is out of the city and officials said that on Monday, after his return, the union has asked for a meeting with the management.

Mr. Cross said that the conciliator method of determining the bargaining agent would take only a day or two while the NLRB election method would not be less than three weeks, depending on the availability of an NLRB representative to accept the application and later conduct the election.

The company has been engaged primarily in making steel truck dump bodies for the government.

SEEK ACTION ON MEASURE TO GIVE COMPENSATION

Administration Approval Backs Benefit Payment Bill.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, June 18—With full administration approval, Senator Pepper (D-Fla.) sought Senate action today on a broad measure designed to provide government benefit payments for the civilian victims of war not in the United States and its possessions, including military areas all over the world.

Providing monthly cash payments for the injury, disability, death or enemy detention of civilians, the measure would establish the machinery to coordinated relief of wartime civilian distress on an emergency basis in areas which had suffered from bombing or other attacks.

As now provided the widow of a citizen killed or otherwise by the enemy could receive monthly compensation ranging from $30 to $85, depending on the number of her children.

Disability payments to men or persons would range from $5 to $85 a month, depending on the extent of injuries. But no payments would be made for less than one-third disability.

Ickes Warns Coal Supplies Should Be Laid in Now

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, June 18 — If Mr. and Mrs. America don't get busy and have their coal bins filled up, they're tempting the possibility of heatless houses next winter, with fuel not to be had for love nor money.

That was the warning of Fuel Coordinator Harold L. Ickes who said today the nation is not providing itself with full protection against coal shortages despite the government's repeated urging that all consumers "buy coal now."

Ickes' aides already are at work on an emergency coal allocation program, against the possibility that the war haulage burden on transportation systems may cause coal shortages.

The coordinator said each householder should put in his entire winter's supply this summer, if possible, and he said he thought supplies adequate for 60 to 90 days were not too much for the ordinary industrial consumer to have on hand. Vital war industries and utilities, he added, ought to carry coal enough to last at least 120 days.

Writer Sees No Vital Reason for Allied War Gloom

By DEWITT MacKENZIE
Wide World War Analyst

The violence of the fighting in the various theaters of combat, as the axis strains to get its war-machine into top speed for a killing, is producing the usual heavy fluctuations of emotion among the Allied peoples, and for no vital reason there has been a fair amount of gloom knocking about the last day or two.

Without possible doubt we're going to get a lot more of the sweat and blood and tears British Prime Minister Churchill promised long ago, but there are no present signs that we shall see anything worse than the war already has produced.

The Allies are encountering some setbacks, but from my observation post the conflict has appeared to be moving along fairly well for our side. We've taken some hard knocks and handed out some but, after all, war is that way, you know. Thus it was with some concern that one read Premier Curtin's gloomy warning to Australians yesterday.

Curtin's Statement

Mr. Curtin said that the news from Libya wasn't good and that the Russian situation held dangers for the Allied cause.

This was particularly disturbing since a fortnight earlier the premier declared:

"I defy the enemy to land large forces in Australia."

What could have happened in those two weeks to alter the premier's viewpoint so radically? In that time we've knocked the daylights out of the Japs at Midway and have added to this victory in the Aleutians.

The Russians have withstood all Nazi effort to get their overdue offensive started. The great Soviet naval base of Sevastopol has held in the face of fierce attacks, and today the German dead are piled high before the defenses. The massed Hitlerian assaults in the Kharkov sector at the gateway to the Caucasus, have failed to do more than dent the Bolshevist line [illegible] and the Reds are showing the strength to counterattack.

It's true that the news from Libya isn't good. Nazi Marshal Rommell—one of the great generals of this war—has staged a spectacular offensive which today is threatening the important British position at the port of Tobruk. However, the Allied forces have been in much worse position in Libya before this. Tobruk has been in Axis hands, and even if it should fall now, it's not a matter of despair.

Tank Superiority

Rommel's gains appear due in large degree to numerical superiority in tanks. However, the British position may be eased by rank reinforcements which they reportedly received as the result of the sensational dash of the big convoy to Tobruk this week.

The movement of this convoy and another to Malta precipitated a great air-sea battle in which Yankee airmen played a magnificent part. The damage suffered by the British is a limited to be "considerable." But the British fleet took another terrific beating.

The British suffered losses, but they had the strength and courage to ram the noses of their convoys into such a powerful Axis position.

There undoubtedly are many grave dangers ahead of us, and the crisis calls for every ounce of effort we can give, but taking the situation as a whole there is nothing to cause despair. Personally I like the line given to the French people yesterday by old Marshal Petain:

"I do not lose faith."

FATHER OF 7 KILLED

LT. SKILLIN PLACED ON ARMY DUTY HERE

Given Intelligence Officer Assignment at War Plant.

Lt. Boyd W. Skillin has been assigned to the Army Ordnance Plant as assistant district intelligence officer, it was announced today by Lt. Col. John P. Hall of [illegible]. He has arrived here for duty.

Since his graduation from the Wharton School of Finance and Commerce at Philadelphia in 1933 Lt. Skillin has been associated with airlines as traffic representative and traffic manager. He was commissioned a second lieutenant in the military intelligence reserve upon his graduation from Wharton.

Lt. Skillin's last civilian employment was with the All American airlines which operates a pickup mail and express service in Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Ohio. As a representative of this company he visited Marion less than a year ago when an effort was being made to have mail and express service extended to Marion and other cities in this section of the state.

restaurants. In other words, there must be hot food available twice a day in sufficient quantity to take care of the general course of business.

"Qualifications for a D-5 license, also known as a night club license, are that they must have food available for consumption on the premises. You can see from the above that there are food qualifications in each case but the degree is somewhat different.

"The department has in the past issued licenses before it had some experience with the applicant regarding these food qualifications where it was clearly indicated by equipment and by investigation that there was an intention of serving food. Such was the case of the Mayfair Night Club. Inasmuch as the license had not been in effect quite a month, we had no opportunity to make our usual call and back check on the premises to determine its operation. We can assure you, however, that the matter will be straightened out.

"It is the intention of this department to issue permits only to qualified people in qualified premises and further to insist upon compliance with the Liquor Control Act during the time such permit, or permits, are effective."

The Mayfair club holds a D-5 permit, granted for a $1,000 fee, and the Royal holds four permits, none of which is a night club permit, covering the sale of beer and liquor.

Solicitor Wilhelm said this morning that the code sections referring to D-5 permits and to D-2 and D-3 permits, which are among the four held by the Royal, all permit the holders to sell liquor "only at tables where meals are sold."

ADMINISTRATION RENEWS PRICE CONTROL EFFORTS

Federal Aid Sought For Distribution of Vital Products.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, June 18—The administration today renewed efforts to obtain legislation permitting payment of government subsidies to keep price control ceilings intact in the face of rising production and transportation costs.

Senator Brown (D-Mich.) said he would confer with Price Administrator Leon Henderson and Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones next week on a bill designed to permit the government to help finance the production and distribution of certain vital commodities, such as sugar, gasoline and coal, that otherwise could not be sold in some areas at a profit.

The senate declined to act on a similar proposal May 27 when it gave final legislative approval to a measure increasing the borrowing power of the Reconstruction Finance Corp. by $5,000,000,000.

Some farm bloc members expressed fear that the proposed authority was so broad that it could be used to keep major crop prices below parity.

BRITON URGES REPRISALS

WOULD PLACE RUBBER UNDER NEW AGENCY

Urge Separate Plan for Direction of Rubber Program.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, June 18—The first congressional threat to Donald M. Nelson's overall control of war production appeared developing today with drafting of legislation to place direction of the rubber program under an independent agency.

Conceived by a group of senators seeking production of synthetic rubber and alcohol from farm products, the bill would create a powerful "rubber supplies agency" to coordinate activities now directed by separate units under Nelson.

Chairman Gillette (D-Ia) of the Senate agriculture sub-committee asserted the bill would be introduced as soon as a decision was reached on whether it should stipulate that butadiene, from which the principal type of synthetic rubber is made, should be produced from grain alcohol.

Transfer of jurisdiction over the wartime rubber program to a separate agency was proposed, Senator Norris (Ind-Neb) explained, because the committee believed the present directorship would not utilize surplus grains for distilling the needed alcohol.

Gillette also declared the agency would "eliminate much of the confusion and conflicting statements now existing."

Meantime, another senate committee sought to meet under-secretary of war Robert P. Patterson's objections to a bill to permit annual allocation of about 3,500 tons of the nation's crude rubber stock for servicing of 20,000,000 passenger cars.

The undersecretary protested the bill would give civilians "a first lien" on the rubber supply, which he contended was insufficient for needs of the armed forces.

Accordingly, the Senate small business committee, sponsoring the measure, considered amendments restricting the use of crude rubber for recapping and retreading of [illegible] to [illegible] tires a year to care used by war workers and those engaged in "essential business."

AUTOMAT IS OLD STUFF

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo.—The automat, mechanical waiter now in general use, is an old novelty, according to the Colorado department of information. Report Increase in Population at Industrial School

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., June 18—The population of the boys' industrial school at Lancaster has increased 11 per cent in six months, chiefly because of improper home supervision in wartime, Welfare Director Charles L. Sherwood reported today.

The number of boys at the institution rose from 774 last December to 867 this month. Short-handed and school authorities have found that in many cases parents working in war industries, fail to provide proper home supervision for their children.

A similar situation existed during the last war, when the school's population reached an all-time high of 1,350, said Cletus Seneff, superintendent of the institution.

The increase in auto thefts, are [illegible] their cars has slashed commitments for auto theft 40 per cent in the last six months, compared with a similar 1941 period, while the number of boys coming from broken homes has dropped seven per cent, although this group still comprises 54 per cent of the population.

The biggest increase — 60 per cent — came in truancy and theft commitments.

A grade age of boys entering the school, which handles delinquents from 10 to 18 years, was 15 years, three months.

built Consolidated Liberator bombers were aiding Sevastopol's defenders.

While Red army headquarters declared there was no significant change overnight in the 14-day-old battle, the German high command asserted that Nazi troops had breached the system of fortifications north of Sevastopol and seized important positions before the big Crimean naval base.

On the Kharkov front, Soviet dispatches said new attacks in field Marshal Fedor Von Bock's week-old offensive were bloodily repulsed.

"The enemy left 600 men killed on the battlefield, nine damaged tanks and a large quantity of arms," a Soviet communique reported. An earlier communique listed 1,500 German casualties and 15 tanks destroyed.

On the air war front, RAF bombers pounded the German U-boat nest at St. Nazaire, on the Nazi-occupied French coast, and attacked airfields and railways in northern France and Belgium.

No German night raiders appeared over Britain.

St. Nazaire is one of the main bases for far-roving German submarines preying on American coastal shipping.

Apparently beginning to feel the sting of America's rising counter-measures, the German high command for the first time noted "strong American defense" in claiming that Nazi U-boats had sunk 12 more ships in the Caribbean sea and seven in the Atlantic.

Near No-Man's Land

If the Germans had ever popped up out of the no-man's land which was within shouting distance straight ahead, there would have been no necessity of firing shots. The sight of this particular tank crew would have been enough to shock them to death.

The crew, in addition to the regular tank officer who by this time was just going along for the ride, consisted of our conducting officer, the London News Chronicle's Norman Clark, and me—with me at the controls.

Clark, at a gun position, theoretically destroyed everything in sight as I investigated the operational vagaries of this honey of an American product.

Actually, though, driving a tank isn't a great deal different from driving an automobile, except that instead of a steering wheel you have two big levers. When you want to turn to the left, you pull back the left lever, after shifting into a gear one step lower than the one you have been cruising at.

The lever really acts like a brake, slowing down the left track of the tank while the right track continues at the faster rate of speed, thus forcing you around to the left.

Driving Differences

There are a few important differences between tank and automobile driving, however, which you discover quickly. In the first place you find that shifting gears requires plenty of strength. You have to shift into the numerous gears frequently and on each shift you've really got to put all your weight into it.

Then there's the operation of the clutch—and that requires a push which, after you've done it three or four times, leaves your left leg all tied up in a knot.

All this time, of course, you're bumping over rough ground, paying no attention to obstacles, turning here and there, shaking the daylights out of everyone including yourself and forgetting all about the fact you are heading straight for the German lines.

As the wind constantly whips sand bitingly into your face and you are just about ready to call it quits for the day anyway because you are all worn out, the regular tank officer takes care of that last little item with—"I think you'd better turn back. It's not very healthy out beyond here."

Completely soaked in dust and really tired as you leave the tank back at its station, you find it a relief to get back into the utility wagon, but you are filled with two emotions—pride in the American product and what the users say about it, and admiration for the men who take it into battle.

house military affairs subcommittee which commended efforts of the dollar-a-year men and said Guthrie's charges lacked proof other than as evidence of sharp differences of opinion among war production officials.

Philip D. Reed, chief of the WPB bureau of industry branches, was cited by the Senate committee as not having taken "the necessary action to obtain the maximum conversion of private industry to war production in the shortest possible time."

Report on Reed

Reed was Guthrie's immediate superior when Guthrie and his friends quit WPB, and the report said Reed was serving WPB "on a dollar-a-year basis, on leave from his position as chairman of the board of the General Electric Company from which company he is presently receiving a salary and bonus totaling $120,000 per year."

"The committee has not been impressed with Mr. Reed's ability or accomplishments," the report said.

Chairman Truman in his statement said "This committee has repeatedly concluded that the work of the OPM and WPB has been hampered by the extent to which their personnel was predominately drawn from the big business groups." He added that while there was no question as to patriotism, integrity, or ability, the "attitudes and associations which these men have acquired through the years makes it undesirable to rely upon them exclusively for direction of the war production programs."

He said "labor has demonstrated its right to a greater degree of participation in the operating work of the war production board," and recommended a "wider opportunity" for small businessmen to participate in WPB administration and a place in the setup for "many of the country's outstanding independent-minded production engineers."

Cleveland Payroll Tops All American Cities

CLEVELAND, June 18—Cleveland, with its $7,300,000 weekly industrial payroll, leads all other American cities in the wartime increase of business activity, the Chamber of Commerce asserted today.

The rise in business activity here, as of last April 1, was 48 per cent above normal, compared with an 8 per cent gain over normal on April 1, 1941, according to results of a survey by the Detroit Board of Trade announced by Walter I. Beam, the chamber's executive vice president.

Pittsburgh was second to Cleveland, with a 47 per cent gain over normal; Baltimore, third, up 42 per cent.

MRS. MURDOCK TAKES A CASE

by George Harmon Coxe

Joyce took an immediate dislike to Perry Clarke.

CHAPTER ONE
Instinctive Dislike

FROM where she sat on the quarter-circle of red leather that served to make up the corner table unit Joyce Murdock had first noticed the man as he crossed diagonally from the entrance to the alcove set aside for the bar. That had been some minutes ago, when the waiter brought the coffee.

Now, as she put aside her cup, she saw the man smiling from across the room; furthermore, he appeared to be looking right at her. His back was to the bar, his elbows hooked along the moulding, and when she found both his smile and stare fixed and unwavering, she lowered her glance. Quite sure that she did not know him, yet aware that she might have at some time met him casually, she stole a final glance towards the bar. He was still smiling.

The occupants of the intervening tables were, she saw, quite busy. The man was obviously not looking at them, but at her—or someone at her table. Yet as he observed her dinner companion she saw that both were unaware of him. On her left Ward Allen was glancing at the check and putting a bill on the change plate across from her. Delia Stewart was quite shamelessly inspecting her young face in the mirror of her compact.

With a mental shrug, Joyce dismissed the man at the bar. The waiter went away and Ward Allen offered a cigaret.

"Too bad Kent can't make it."

"I know," Joyce said.

"I hear it's quite a play."

"Always when we four want to go out he has to work," Delia said, satisfied at last with her inspection and snapping the compact.

"It's hardly that bad." Joyce said. "But tonight one of his men has the flu and another is at the hospital awaiting the arrival of an heir. Perhaps he'll join us later for a drink."

As she spoke she felt Delia's glance go past her and stop. She saw the look of puzzled interest, then heard her say, under her breath, "And who might this be?"

Joyce turned to follow the glance. The man was three steps from the table, glass in hand. His smile very broad now, was directed not at her, but at Ward, and seeing him at close range, she took an immediate dislike to him.

"I say, Allen."

Mr. Clarke

Ward looked up, and something happened to him. A moment before his blond good-looking face had been relaxed, his blue eyes amiable; now a stony immobility clamped upon his jaw and his stare grew hard and hot.

"Oh, hello," he said, something thin and savage in his voice.

"Heard you were in town," the man said. "Been meaning to look you up. Well"—he let his smile move to Joyce and Delia—"you might introduce me."

Already on his feet, Ward Allen hesitated a moment, then he did what was expected of him, his manner courteous and inflexible.

"May I present Mr. Clarke? Mrs. Murdock and Miss Stewart."

Clarke bowed. A waiter came up with a chair and he took it. "Do you mind?" he said, and sat down.

By this time Joyce's instinctive dislike had become definite and real. Rather short, slender, with a small, clipped mustache, Clarke looked to be in his late thirties. His double-breasted dinner jacket was carefully tailored to lend an exaggerated width to his slim shoulders, his hands were soft and white, his hair was longish and lay in smooth symmetrical waves upon his long, narrow skull.

She had known what he would be like even before he spoke, and although she busied herself with her bag and gloves to avoid looking at him, she could not help hearing what he said.

"You don't seem very surprised, Allen. How long has it been? Well over a year since you left, hasn't it?" Clarke paused to explain. "I've just come up from South America. We used to pal around a bit when he was in Caragua."

Joyce continued to ignore him and stole a glance at her wrist watch, wondering if they would miss the curtain. It was one of these last minute dates, which partly explained why her husband could not be with them. Ward had telephoned just before dinner to say he had seats for Late Harvest, and without bothering to dress for the theater they had come here to Hugos for some fun to eat. Now they hadn't much time.

About Hester

ALL at once she realized Clarke was addressing her. She looked at him. He was leaning towards her, still smiling.

"Murdock?" he said thoughtfully. "It wouldn't be Mrs. Kent Murdock would it?"

"It would," Joyce said.

Clarke laughed lightly. "Well this is a coincidence. I don't suppose there could be more than one Kent Murdock. You're not by any chance his first wife?"

"No, I'm not."

"Was the first Mrs. Murdock's name Hester? Oh, I'm not trying to be important," he added hastily. "Really. But if Hester was his first wife it's rather exciting because you see I married Hester Murdock."

"Oh. It was the best Joyce could do at the moment for she saw his smile come back at once. I liked it so much I was sorry to keep her waiting any longer. "How amusing. So you're married to Hester."

"Was married," Clarke said. "It didn't take—for long. Very soon she married Miguel Lozano and went to Caragua. Who knows the Lozanos?" He sipped some of his drink, glanced at Ward. "Yes, Hester did very well. Lost a man three months ago—you knew that of course, Allen—and Hester is still doing nicely. . . You knew she was in town?"

"I heard she was," Allen said. "You can't blame me for seeing that Thorne & Company spent her business. You're all with Thorne & Company aren't you?" Yes, Hester's taken a house at Cedar Point for months. I believe. Never has been strange she hasn't gotten in touch with you."

"How long have you been here?"

"I flew in the day before yesterday."

Joyce was aware now. Within her the fabric of mixed emotions began to tear, and looking back, she realized that from the very instant Ward had looked up to find Clarke at the table, a curious air of tension had closed in.

At first intangible, it had become something she could almost feel. Some intuitive tremor warned her that this man was doing more than making idle conversation. The way he looked at Ward, his head tipped back but always watchful, as though not concerned so much with what he said as with the effect of his words upon his listeners. Nothing escaped him. There was something sly and supremely confident in his glance, and he was obviously finding pleasure in the things he saw in Ward Allen's face.

Della, too, had sensed the undercurrent that flowed between the two men. No longer was her glance politely quizzical. She was watching, her glance, her face grave and her eyes doubtful.

CRESTLINE MAN GETS CITATION

Among Crew of Naval Vessel Which Repaired Torpedo-Damaged Ship.

Special to The Star

CRESTLINE, June 18—Chief electrician's Mate Charles Stanbach, 27, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alois Stanbach of 211 East Main street, who has been in the U. S. navy for the past 10 years recently received special commenda-

[illegible] Admiral Ernest J. King, [illegible] and chief of United States fleet, for extraordinary courage in line of duty.

Stanbach was a member of a crew of a navy vessel which for weeks has repaired the torpedo-damaged and abandoned Argentine tanker Victoria and then returned the original crew aboard to complete a trip to New York.

The Victoria was blasted by two torpedoes from an Axis submarine off the Atlantic coast. It was shelled several hours later by a navy patrol vessel, and the tanker investigated.

Under secret sealed orders issued by mysterious navy, a party of eight men and two officers was put aboard and reported the ship capable of running under her own power.

The Argentine tanker's life boats were sighted in the meantime and the steamer returned to New York.

[illegible] and the officers were praised by Admiral King for [illegible] judgment, skill and [illegible] and it was learned [illegible] commendations were [illegible] to people at all times."

Stanbach left Crestline in 1933 to enlist in the navy. He was born in Austria, Hungary and came to the United States with his parents at the age of four.

WILL GIVE INSTRUCTION

Special to The Star

BUCYRUS, June 18—Special instruction in home guard duties will be provided for state guards at their training camp period next month. Local guards men will be among the state force of 2,000 to be given training at a camp to be selected later.

Garments on Hand for Red Cross Workers

Groups and individuals sewing for the Marion County Chapter of the Red Cross will find plenty of cut garments on hand at the production center on South State street it was announced today by Mrs. J. T. McNamara, Red Cross sewing chairman. They may be had by calling at the production room in the afternoons from 1 to 4 o'clock.

Garments cut and ready to be sewed include women's skirts, children's play suits and children's rompers sizes for two-year olds.

The committee is anxious that the garments be made in order to avoid a rush of work when the fall and winter sewing is started.

Only about 1.61 per cent of the population of India are engaged in factory work.

They Cover the War Fronts

Edward Kennedy visiting with native troops.

This is one of a series of articles on Associated Press correspondents covering the war fronts for the Star and AP members.

Edward Kennedy has been in the thick of hot news abroad ever since 1937, when he helped to cover the Spanish Civil war for The Associated Press.

He has seen historic events take place in Hungary, Rumania, Yugoslavia, Greece, Italy, Turkey, Palestine, Syria, Libya and Egypt. Now, he's chief of AP's bureau at Cairo.

Born June 26, 1905, in Brooklyn, N. Y., Kennedy studied architecture at Carnegie Tech before deciding on a journalism career and getting his first news job on the Canonsburg (Pa.) Daily Notes. He worked on newspapers in New York and New Jersey and served the Paul Block newspapers in Washington before becoming a member of the New York Herald Tribune's Paris staff in 1931. He returned to this country and worked for the Newark (N. J.) Ledger until October, 1932, when he joined the Associated Press at Pittsburgh. Six weeks later, he went to Washington as a member of the AP's regional staff.

He was assigned to the Paris bureau in 1935 and worked for a short time in Rome before becoming a war correspondent at Valencia and Madrid in 1937. Early in 1940, he was sent to Istanbul, from which point he made frequent trips to Ankara and an extended tour of Palestine and Syria. When the Italian campaign from Libya toward the Suez Canal became active in the summer of 1940, he was transferred to Cairo.

STEUBENVILLE MAN NEW KIWANIS HEAD

Carl A. Weinman Elected Governor of Ohio District.

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND, June 18—Carl A. Weinman of Steubenville is the new governor of the Ohio Kiwanis district.

He was named last night during sessions of the 27th convention of Kiwanis International.

The convention was told today that "certain unfortunate influences" in the teaching of history have retarded better international understanding.

Presenting the report of the Kiwanis committee on public affairs for Canada, Chairman Harold M. Dagon of Victoria, B. C., declared:

"Instances innumerable could be quoted where not only are historical inaccuracies foisted upon youth but presented in a way that tends to perpetuate hatreds, suspicions and general distrust between peoples who should share common ties of the closest friendship."

He did not elaborate, but said correction of these influences is a major point receiving attention of the Canadian committee.

Payrolls Increase Over Employes, Report Shows

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., June 18—The Ohio State university bureau of business research reported today that Ohio industrial payrolls have increased more rapidly than the number of employes, "reflecting higher rates and overume."

In April, payrolls were 34 per cent above April, 1941, while the number of employes rose 10 per cent, the bureau said.

Payroll increases in April, compared to the corresponding 1941 month: Akron 35 per cent, Canton 25, Cincinnati 46, Cleveland 36, Columbus 48, Dayton 22, Toledo 32 and Youngstown 5.

Employment gains for the month by cities: Akron 12 per cent, Canton 15, Cincinnati 18, Cleveland 12, Columbus 17, Dayton 5 and Toledo 4.

Willkie Says He Doubts If He Will Seek Office

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, June 18—Wendell L. Willkie, Republican presidential candidate in 1940, last night declared: "I doubt if I will ever aspire to public office again.

"There are some things in which I am so greatly interested that I don't want to see their advocacy tinged with self-interest," said Willkie, who has been mentioned as a possible dark horse candidate in the New York gubernatorial contest.

OPA Director Urges Price List Preparation

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., June 18—Director H. T. Beckmann of the Ohio office of price administration today urged Buckeye retailers to prepare two price lists required by the maximum price regulations. These are a statement of ceiling prices for all "cost of living" commodities the retailer carries, and a base period list of maximum prices he charged in March.

Where Ohio News is Reported To Star

The Associated Press maintains bureaus with trained staffs in Columbus, Cleveland and Cincinnati to report happenings in Ohio, one of the news hot spots of the nation. Here is a view of the Columbus bureau, key center for Associated Press activities in the state, and some of the men who gather it. The staff members (clockwise around the room) are Burdette T. Johns, chief of bureau; Bob Brandus, clerk; Frank Howell, sports editor; Don W. Stull, filing editor; Reed D. Smith, and J. H. Colburn, state editor.

(Second of a series of three articles telling how The Associated Press can be operated in Ohio.)

COLUMBUS, O. — Doings of Ohio congressional and state officials provide a daily fare of news served up by expert writers on politics and government for The Associated Press.

Through AP's Washington and Columbus staffs, The Marion Star is able to provide an accurate and timely picture of how the public representatives serve their constituents.

In Washington one man devotes his time to reporting activities of Ohio's two senators and 24 congressmen. He is a member of the AP regional staff, which aids the Washington general staff in blanketing new sources of the nation's capitol.

At Columbus, the state capitol, two men—often three—make regular rounds of the state and federal offices. They confer with the governor, secretary of state, attorney general, supreme court justices, welfare, tax and highway officials and a host of other persons charged with conducting the state's business.

Governor's Conferences

Gov. John W. Bricker conducts three or four press conferences a week. At all other times he, members of his cabinet and other state department heads are available to Associated Press reporters checking news tips and inquiries from AP's 45 member newspapers in Ohio.

One reporter, H. H. Dautherty, dean of Ohio's statehouse correspondents, makes his headquarters in the capitol. In addition to checking current government and court activities, he keeps his fingers on Ohio's constantly-throbbing political pulse.

Another reporter is stationed in the 12-story state office building—where an entire morning is required to check department heads. He also covers Ohio penitentiary and the federal building.

Regular calls also are made at other state offices in the city, selective service headquarters and the army's Fifth Corps area post.

Efficient Election Reporting

State election years provide Ohioans with hot political news, and the Columbus Associated Press bureau is headquarters for the fastest machinery for gathering accurate, statewide returns.

With the cooperation of The Marion Star and other Ohio Associated Press member papers, the AP is able soon after polls close, to report the first returns. This system provides for a steady flow of accurate returns even before reports reach the secretary of state's office.

Reports are compiled at Columbus by a special election staff. Summaries of various contests are prepared and given to editors who keep up-to-the minute stories running on the leased wires.

Returns gathered by The Associated Press often are so far ahead of the secretary of state's figures that they show entirely different trends. But, after each election, checks disclose that The Associated Press figures vary only a fraction from the states' official returns.

Included in a modern fad of the time and a critic's wise device has been found for baking old newspapers as they accumulate in a city.

Navy Opens Radar Study to Young Men 17 to 21

The Navy's Radar Training Station at Ohio State University is now open to young men from 17 to 21 years of age, inclusive, it was announced yesterday by C. F. Silber of the Marion recruiting station. Previously the training was offered only to men 21 and over.

Requirements for enlistment remain as follows: Between 17 and 20 years of age, preferably but not necessarily be a high school graduate, pass the qualifying examination and pass the physical examination for the naval reserve.

Enlistment is in the naval reserve and men will be called after the end of the war. Men with training and experience in Radar will have a good grounding for work after the war in frequency modulation and television, for the three operate on the principal of ultra-high frequency, according to the communication.

Kenny Keltner's Single Wins for Tribe; Cardinals Notch Seventh Straight.

By The Associated Press

The Cleveland Indians and the Washington Senators have been playing photo-finish baseball most of the season but the Tribe has been dominating the picture.

Washington today fought its second triumph in nine starts against the Tribe, who has captured most of the games from the Senators by narrow margins. Last night's 5 to 4 Tribe triumph was a pretty fair sample.

The Indians have captured four games by a one-run margin, one other contest by two runs and two others by seven or more tallies. Washington's sole scalp was a 7 to 1 triumph. The Indians have won all the nocturnal games, last night's being the third.

But last night, as in many of the other battles, the Tribe had to splinter from behind to win. Jake Early hit a home run in the second inning, and the Senators got three more runners off Jim Bagby in the third before he went to the showers with only one man out.

Milnar Allows One Hit

From then on Washington was hand-cuffed, Al Milnar allowing one hit in four frames and, when he retired for a pinch hitter in the seventh session, Tom Ferrick finished the game, permitting only a brace of hits in two innings.

The Indians cut down the four-run handicap by pushing over single markers in the fourth and sixth innings, but were still on the short end of a 4 to 2 score in the stretch session.

Lou Boudreau opened the home half by fanning. Ray Mack singled and [illegible] on Otto Denning's [illegible] to right. Oscar Grimes [illegible] Mack and walked to fill the [illegible] but retired for pinch runner Ken Keltner.

Mack brought home the third run when Roy Weatherly grounded out, and Orie Hillcrest was given an intentional pass to load the bases again.

Keltner's Hit Wins

This brought Kenny Keltner, who was batting in place of Jeff Heath, to the plate to bat against both Denning and Potter with the deciding runs.

The St. Louis Cardinals, riding the crest of a seven-game winning streak, took possession of Brooklyn today for a five-game series with the Dodgers that may throw the National league pennant struggle back into a battle royal.

Through quirks of the weather there have been seven games played only four times thus far and of these games the Redbirds have won three—proving to the satisfaction of St. Louis, at least, that the Dodgers' big game lead is an uncertain bulwark.

The Cardinals, warmed up for today's important tussle by whale-whacking the New York Giants, 3-0, yesterday on the five-hit hurling of big Mort Cooper, who pitched no-hit ball till the seventh inning. It was Cooper's fourth shutout of the season.

Dodgers Beat Cubs

The Dodgers showed no qualms at the approach of their challengers, turning back the Chicago Cubs, 5-1. Kirby Higbe pitched four-hit ball for his sixth victory and would have had a shutout except for a homer by Bob Sturgeon in the second stanza.

It was pitcher's day in the majors.

At Detroit, Paul Trout who had been beaten five times in a row, hurled a five-hitter to hand the world champion New York Yankees their first shutout of the season as the Tigers won, 1-0.

Phil Marchildon, the strong righthander of the Philadelphia Athletics, also ended a five-game losing streak by pitching five-hit ball to beat the Chicago White Sox, 1-3.

Elden Auker stopped a nine-game winning streak for the Boston Red Sox and a seven-game losing streak for the St. Louis Browns by hurling a six-hit 6-3 victory.

The Cincinnati Reds captured both ends of a double-header at Boston, 4-2 and 4-3, the latter game going 11 innings. Paul Derringer and Ray Starr were the Red hurlers.

The Pittsburgh Pirates bunched their hits for two three-run innings to down the Phils, 6-4, in a night game.

Because of the abandonment by the League of Nations of broadcasts and the expiration of a contract with the Swiss Federal Council a powerful radio station at Geneva has become the property of a Swiss concern.

Roseberry Fans 15, Gives Hawks 3-0 Win Over Her

CLEVELAND BECOMES BOXING'S CAPITAL FOR WAR DURATION

Bomber for MacArthur' Benefit Show To Draw 30,000 Fight Fans.

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND, June 18 — If the veteran Chicago promoter Nate Lewis knows what he's talking about, Cleveland is becoming boxing's capital for the duration of the war.

Seconding the nomination, Matchmaker Larry Atkins pointed out today that before a dollar clanked into the till for next Tuesday night's all-star card here, purses totaling $52,000 were guaranteed the ten headliners and eight preliminary scrappers.

Melio Bettina, undefeated in 32 starts as a heavyweight, and Harry Bobo, the Pittsburgh paralyzer, were the first out-of-town scrappers to open training. The hometown rivals, lightheavies Jimmy Bivins and Joey Maxim, have been at it for some time.

Promoter Lewis paid Atkins a quick visit this week and declared night blackouts on both coasts and a wealth of good fighting talent in and around Cleveland were combining to make the lake city ringdom's capital for the duration.

Atkins also has some ideas on the subject and they read like this, from left to right:

Recent Cleveland cards featuring Bob Pastor drew $52,000 against Lem Franklin and $48,000 against Bivins, but the New York gates were only around $20,000 each when Pastor took on Tami Mauriello and Gus Lesnevich;

Bettina and Altus Allen pulled only 3,000 customers into the 23,000 seats of Chicago Stadium recently;

Cleveland's last 11 fight shows have drawn a gross of $271,000—"pretty good for a town that drew only eight and ten thousand for the first two and where, using an indoor arena, we had only 13,000 seats to do it in;" and

While five super-dooper bouts are lined up for Tuesday's Cleveland News Bomber-for-MacArthur show in Cleveland Stadium, New York's last card was three weeks ago and nothing is lined up there now or in Chicago.

The other headliners for the 70-round outdoor cards, which the promoters hope will lure 30,000 customers, are Anton Christoforidis against Johnny Colan, Franklin versus Sergeant Joe Mercato of Buffalo, and Cleveland's Harry Teony with Maxie Shapiro.

NATURE BATS .500

LITTLE ROCK, Ark.—Squirrels were more plentiful in Arkansas this season than in several years but so were the mosquitoes. In some sections the insects turned out in such large swarms that hunting parties were routed before they got a shot. It was one of the lightest squirrel kills on record during the 30-day open season just concluded.

Golf's Biggest Show Underway Today

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, June 18—Golf's biggest wartime show got underway at the Ridgemoor club today as more than 100 of the nation's top-ranking linksmen teed off in the opening round of the 72-hole Hale America tournament, total proceeds of which will go to service charities.

For four days the stars will scrap it out, until on Sunday evening one will draw down the winning prize of $1,100. The galleries, judging by the number who pursued Bob Hope and Bobby Jones around the fairways yesterday, should be among the largest ever to witness a golf event in this country.

To all intents and purposes, it really is the national open championship. Practically all the big players are on hand and playing the regular open route of 72 holes. The winner, though, will not go down in the golf records as an open champion.

All will go the full distance. The tournament directors, dreaming of a total gate of more than $100,000, did not want any of the gallery attractions eliminated at the end of 36 holes, as is customary in open championships.

The players themselves are predicting openly the winner will need to shoot a quartet of 69's, and the most popular guess is that he will have to shoot a 72-hole total of not over 275.

Erie's 9-Inning Rally Beats Canton Terriers

CANTON, O., June 18 — Erie, driving hard to catch first-place Charleston, pounded out five hits for three runs in the ninth inning to defeat Canton 5-4 in a Mid-Atlantic league game last night.

The Sailors moved within two games of the loop leaders as last-place Springfield toppled Charleston 2 to 0, Tom Astbury's homer with one on in the first accounting for the tallies. Dayton and Zanesville split a double-header, Dayton taking the opener 2 to 0 and the Cubs the night cap 7 to 4.

Snatches of Sports

By HUGH FULLERTON JR.
Wide World Sports Columnist

NEW YORK, June 18—Has your softball team played a "magazine game" yet? The idea comes from Louisville's Bonnycastle club and it sounds like a swell way to make a big little contribution to the armed forces. . . The club merely established an admission price for its Saturday night double-header of "one or more" copies of a current issue of a good magazine. First night's receipts were 2,149 pieces of reading matter which went to the air base unit at Bowman Field. Bonnycastle and other members of its league will look after Fort Knox and other nearby units, but Chairman George Mercker points out there are an estimated 500,000 softball teams in the United States and plenty of other army camps. . . .

Second Guess—Playing a round of golf during a recent alumni outing at Cleveland, Frank Leahy, Notre Dame coach, cut loose a drive that made a three-point landing on the noggin of a player emerging from the woods ahead. Frank rushed up only to find his dazed victim offering apologies, thinking he had nearly beaned Frank Leahy then escorted the gent to a nearby pump and suggested that he soak his handkerchief with cold water and apply it to the back of his head. "If that doesn't help," said Frank, "I think you ought to go to the hospital for an examination." "That's good advice," replied the victim, "I ought to know, too, because I'm a doctor." . . .

Today's Guest Star—Fiem Hall, Fort Worth Star-Telegram, "If the professional coaches of college athletics continue to pour into the services at their present pace, the volunteer 'grandstand coaches' (unappreciated in other years) may have to get off their second guess seats and show what they can do on the field with a first guess."

SHAUGHNESSY AMONG COACHES CONSIDERED FOR ARMY POSITION

An aide in the Washington office of Colonel John Thomas Taylor, director of army emergency relief, said Shaughnessy's appointment was "possible". He added, however, that the army's plan for two service teams still was in the tentative stage and that it would be a week or ten days before details would be disclosed.

The war department announced recently that it hopes to sponsor an east and a west army all-star team next fall. Wallace Wade, Duke university coach, has been prominently mentioned for the eastern coaching job.

FRED PERRY QUITS TENNIS FOR GOOD

Pro Champ Says Arm Injury Is Reason.

By The Associated Press

MEXICO CITY, June 18—Fred Perry, world's professional tennis champion and former top-flight amateur player, announced today his retirement from the sport "because I just can't play any more."

The slender Englishman who was ranked as No. 1 tennis player of the world when he was winning amateur championships, said he was stepping out because of an arm injury suffered in a fall at Madison Square Garden, New York, last winter. At the time, the injury forced him to default to Bobby Riggs, 1941 amateur champion, in the first match of their tour.

Perry won the U. S. singles championship three consecutive years, and also, at various times, held the English and French hard court titles, the Wimbledon All-England championship, and was a star of the English Davis cup teams for years.

Battle Royal To Feature Armory Wrestling Card

Black Panther, Bobby Castle, Nick Billings, Ivan Kalimkoff, Rufus Jones and Leo Jensen in Free-for-All Fight.

Local wrestling customers will greet the popular Black Panther of Louisville and Toledo back to the Marion ring tonight when he goes against five equally-troublesome gladiators in an all-star battle royal show at 8:30 in the Armory arena.

The Panther, who has been wrestling before Marion crowds for nearly eight years, has not appeared here in nearly three months. Sometime ago he was informed by his Toledo Selective Service board that he was subject to immediate call. However, before entering the service Promoter Les Fishbaugh decided upon at least one more whirl around the north central Ohio fight circuit for the sepia-skinned ace.

Last week the Panther was scheduled for a 30-minute bout with Kansas City's Bull Dog Bobby Castle. However, on the way to Marion from Toledo he was involved in an auto collision near Fostoria. His auto was damaged considerably, but he escaped with only minor bruises.

Bobby Castle, who made a successful debut here last week when Martino Angelo was disqualified for questionable ring practices, will make his second start here tonight as a member of the battle royal sextet. Castle is a highly respected ring performer throughout the middle west and far west.

Others scheduled to start in the free for all battle are Ivan Kalimkoff, Rufus Jones, Nick Billings and Leo Jensen, all familiar faces with the local customers.

For those who are unfamiliar with various games of the grunt and groan league, here is how a battle royal works: First, all six fighters enter the ring; the first two men to lose go to the showers, for their work they receive expense money only; the next two to lose return for a 45-minute semi-final bout and the finalists in the free for all are matched in the two-hour main-go attraction.

MT. GILEAD CHIEF QUITS FIRE DEPT.

Elza Snair Resigns, Effective on July 1.

Special to The Star

MT. GILEAD, June 18—The resignation of Elza Snair as Mt. Gilead fire chief has been accepted by council here and Mayor Ray G. Booher has stated that no appointment will be made until July 1 when Snair's resignation becomes effective.

Snair, in presenting his resignation, stated that he was unable to devote the necessary time to the job. He was appointed in October, 1941, succeeding the late H. C. Johnstone.

Council has approved a resolution providing for installation of new concrete curbing on the south side of Center street from the first alley west of Main street to the first alley east of Main street.

Mayor Booher has informed council that he has taken action to stop trains on the New York Central lines from blocking the Marion and and West High street grade crossings for more than the legal time limit. Complaints have been made that trains were blocking traffic for as long as an hour at these crossings. The company has been notified to cease the practice or train crews will be arrested and fined.

Teammate To Join Berea Sensation at Ohio State

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND, June 17—Don Mohr, 195-pound blocker for Berea High school's star tailback Tom Phillips, said today he would join Phillips, his cousin, in enrolling at Ohio State university next fall.

Mohr, a blocking back who was Phillips' principal passing target on Berea's undefeated 1941 eleven, probably will be transformed into an end at State. He and Phillips—who was sought by 42 colleges before he finally decided to cast his lot with Paul Brown's Buckeyes — returned yesterday from a visit to the Columbus campus. They said they planned to work the remainder of the summer instead of enrolling for the term beginning next Monday, as Phillips originally announced.

BREWERS CALL ON BENCH FOR TEAM

Only One Regular in Outfield as Injuries Hit.

By The Associated Press

Milwaukee's American association league leaders started an eastern division road trip today with a patched up lineup, but the Brewers weren't particularly disturbed about it.

That same patched up lineup—boasting only one regular outfielder—staged a three-run rally in the ninth inning last night to turn what looked like a sure defeat into victory as they conquered Minneapolis, 8-7.

Outfielder Ted Gullic was the only regular in the Brewers' outer garden, Hal Peck, Bill Norman and Frank Secory being on the shelf because of injuries.

The Miller-Brewer clash was the only game in the league yesterday, although Indianapolis played an exhibition tilt with Mickey Cochrane's Great Lakes nine. The Sailors won 7-1.

URGES YOUTHS TO STAY

By International News Service

HARRISBURG — Youth was urged by Dr. Theodore A. Distler, president of Franklin and Marshall college, to stay in school rather than "fuss around and get nervous" in the present crisis. Dr. Distler told Y. M. C. A. youth groups here that he was not worried about the outcome of the war but about post-war settlement. Making peace will be more difficult than winning the war, in his opinion.

WHEAT PRICES FALL FROM MONTH'S HIGH

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, June 15 — Wheat prices fell more than a cent a bushel from the month's highs today as a result of profit taking and selling which traders said was inspired partly by Secretary of Agriculture Wickard's opposition to efforts in congress to keep government-owned surplus grain off the market at below parity prices.
Wickard's references to the necessity of heading off inflation also stilled trade rumors, largely responsible for some of the recent price upturn, that higher loan rates might be authorized for basic crops. Increased movement of new wheat and reports of high yields even though tests show too much moisture attracted attention. However, most of the wheat is being stored for loans.

FUGITIVE FOR 25 YEARS

ROANOKE, Va.—Jack Furrow, who said his conscience hurt him so much that he feared going insane, has given himself up here for the slaying of a Franklin county man some 25 years ago. County Sheriff Grady Gregory said a murder charge would be placed against Furrow, reopening a case that county authorities thought never would be solved. Details of the murder were as vivid in the mind of Furrow as the day he allegedly committed the crime. He said he killed the man with a heavy rock. After the murder, Farrow said he escaped by walking through the mountains at night and sleeping during the day. He went to Detroit, later to Louisville and finally to Maryland, where he decided to give up.

Early Gains Cancelled and Trends Uncertain in Today's Dealings.

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, June 15—Profit taking on yesterday's late run-up dampened the buying spirit to a considerable extent in today's stock market.
Early gains running to a point or so were reduced or cancelled and trends were pretty well mixed. Dealings, fair for a while, eventually slowed to a crawl.
War developments provided little in the way of stimulation, brokers said, although sentiment still was bolstered by revived hopes of a better corporate tax set-up.
Stocks on the resistant side most of the time included American Can, which touched a new 1942 top; N. Y. Central, Westinghouse, Du Pont, Owens-Illinois and Anaconda.
Included to falter were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Chrysler, Kennecott, American Telephone and Western Union.
Helpful markets of the war word congressional chieftains were leaving 90% the matter of legislation authorizing subsidies to industries squeezed between rising costs and fixed price ceilings.
Market analysts derived some satisfaction from the Dun & Bradstreet compilation disclosing the week's bank clearings in principal cities jumped 12.4 per cent over the preceding week and were 1.4 per cent larger than in the comparable 1941 record.
Those studying the inventory picture noted the federal reserve estimate that department store stocks in the New York district at the end of May were 70 per cent above the same time last year.

YOUR HEALTH

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D

Stomach Ills

Most interesting and, to a certain extent, peculiar news comes to us from England. This information is that after the evacuation from Dunquerque by the British Army a veritable epidemic of ulcer of the stomach broke out in the troops which had returned from the Low Countries.

Other forms of digestive disturbance also occurred, so much so that in a group of invalided soldiers admitted to a hospital near London, there were 175 medical disorders, of which no fewer than 43 (22.5%) were cases of stomach disorder and of these, after careful examination, 34 were actually found to have some form of ulcer of the stomach.

Remember that these men had been passed by a medical board before being accepted and many of them were members of the regular British Army, so it is assumed that they were in good health before entering service. The number of ulcer patients far outnumbered diseases in the numerical groups closest to them such as bronchitis, pneumonia, rheumatism, etc.

In attempting to formulate the cause for this outbreak one must remember food factors. Most of the soldiers ascribed their symptoms to the Army food. Undoubtedly under the conditions which prevailed during the retreat, most of them lived for days on rough food badly cooked and served at irregular intervals. When they had no food in the stomach they probably had a nervous secretion of acid gastric juices for a long time which would predispose to the formation of ulcer.

The tobacco factor is also stressed. There were only three non-smokers among all the dyspeptics. One patient with a duodenal ulcer used to smoke as many as 40 cigarets a day. The average consumption was over 12 a day. Tobacco, if used excessively, unquestionably upsets the digestive function and under the nervous strain of being under constant gun fire, unquestionably a man who under ordinary circumstances is a moderate smoker would, from nervousness and restlessness, step up his tobacco consumption two or three times.

Another factor which is mentioned in the English reports is oral sepsis. Again we can understand that under conditions of warfare the toilet of the mouth with toothbrush and toothpaste would have to be neglected.

The "trench mouth" of the last war was an indication of this and here again we have a cause that is known to operate under ordinary circumstances in the formation of ulcer. The whole study indicated the fact that has long been suggested, that nervous conditions play a certain part in the formation of ulcer of the stomach or duodenum.

A side effect of this condition has been that a great many English X-ray men who were doing ordinary medical duty have been recalled to take charge of the X-ray laboratories in order to confirm the diagnosis of stomach ulcer. An X-ray man is always a good doctor besides being an X-ray man, and during war conditions it was found that most of them would be more useful in general practice than in X-ray practice. With the epidemic of dyspepsia, a great many men in the armed forces began to complain of dyspepsia in order to be relieved of duty. The symptoms of ulcer of the stomach are of course very easy to fake and there is no certain way to prove or disprove the existence of the condition except by X-ray.

Spencer Explains His Two Objectives and Lillian Agrees To Leave Harry.

LILLIAN turned a shrewd look on my father, a look that pierced the fallacy of the statement he had just made.

"And you expect me to believe, Chief," she said sardonically, "that you cared giving me to the police in the city as well as you could in that lonely farmhouse? My senility must be most apparent."

"Of course I know what you mean," she said. "You believe that this thing has so warped my judgment that I am not capable of dealing with these fiends as I would if Marion's life and honor were not involved. You cannot trust me to do the same thing when I receive messages purporting to be from Marion."

Her voice trailed breathily away, then she spoke again.

Lillian Gives In

"Well, you're right," she said "I give in. I'll do whatever you say, if you'll tell me one thing, truthfully. Is my staying in this house, or in the city, endangering Marion?"

My father gave her a steady, appraising look.

"You always could stand the surgeon's knife, Lillian," he said. "There's no reason why I should not wield it now, so here's your answer. I do not dare trust you where Marion is concerned, and your staying in the city, especially here, is a distinct menace to your child."

She flinched only for the fraction of an instant, then straightened herself and looked at him steadily.

"I will go whenever you say," she told him. "But—Harry will stay here?"

"Part of the time," my father responded.

"You mean there will be nobody here if Marion—" she began.

"I mean nothing of the kind," he said. "Margaret and Katharine will stay here, under ample guard of course. Miss Whitlock will accompany you to the farm."

I almost spoke out of turn at this calm reshuffling of my household and myself, for this was the first I had heard of the plan.

"Margaret is hearing of this plan for the first time, Lillian," he said. "Indeed, I have just completed mapping it out. But Jack Burkett's arrival has made it necessary for me to have Katharine within reach, in case I need her."

Questions began to carom around my brain. Why should he think he would need Katharine at all? Was Jack still bent on kidnapping again? Did my father count on Katharine's influence to stop him? But my father was speaking again and the questions came to rest unanswered.

"I also must have Margaret here for one thing, to impersonate you at that rendezvous two weeks from tomorrow night, if Marion has not been rescued before then."

Lillian's gasping breath was almost a scream.

"You mean, she might be—" she stammered.

Spencer's Two Objectives

"I'm afraid it's unlikely, but it's a possibility," he answered. "And going on from where I was before your question—" his voice held a note of impatience—"if Katharine comes in, Margaret's children at the farm will need attention. You and Miss Whitlock can take care of them without taxing you too much, and—"

He stopped abruptly, and Lillian finished his sentence.

"And they will be healing for me," she said, with a wan smile.

"Exactly, my dear," he said. Then he walked over, lifted her hand and kissed it with stately ceremony. "You are a very good soldier," he said, "as is your husband.

"And now, Margaret and I must leave you. If Harry is well enough, I wish you to go down to the farm day after tomorrow with Miss Whitlock. You will go in the morning, and Katharine will come back in the afternoon. Then, if Harry's wound needs further attention, she can take over.

"You see, I have two objectives; one to get you out of the city, the other to get Katharine into it."

The Stars Say—

For Friday, June 19

INTRIGUING AND unpredictable conditions generally are noted in this day's planetary set-up. While there is definite promise of active, expansive productive and lucrative operations, there may be sudden, disintegrating and frustrating adventures, descending with force and futility.

Those whose birthday it is should be prepared for a year of very definite conflicts and contradictions, with much progress and expansion toward desired hopes and wishes of material character, with increase of finances. Be wary with friendships and safeguard the health.

A child born on this day while enjoying some splendid strokes of good fortune, may also be the victim of over-confidence.
